Chapter 1

Philip Pirrip, (Pip) was a small boy. He was 7 years old. . His name was difficult to say, so it became pip. He was an orphan. His parents were dead, and so were five of his brothers and sisters when he was very young. He lived with his sister and her husband, Joe Gargery, who was Pip's friend . Joe was a blacksmith and Mrs. Joe was 20 years older than Pip. On cold afternoon in winter. Pip sat alone in the marches crying. He went to the graveyard and sat by his parents' grave. A man with leg-irons appeared from behind a grave. He asked Pip where he lived and with whom. He was thin and dirty. When he knew that Joe was a blacksmith.

He asked him to get him the blacksmith's file and some food to let him live. Mrs Joe asked him where he was. While he was helping prepare lunch, he heard that two convicts escaped from the prison ships, where people who committed crimes were put. There was a warning for people. Pip realized that the man was one of them and asked the file to take off the leg-irons and escape from the marches . The next day was the Christmas day . Pip took some food and Joe's file and ran to the graveyard. There was another man with leg-irons but disappeared in the mist. Pip found his man and gave him the food and the file who started to remove his leg-irons. Pip felt guilty of what he had done. He wanted to tell Joe but he feared that Joe mightn't want to be his friend again. He said nothing.

The guests arrived home. Mrs Joe discovered that the meat pie disappeared. The Guests forgot about the meat pie when some soldiers entered asking Joe to mend some handcuffs . They were looking for 2 convicts who broke the handcuffs and escaped. After mending the handcuffs , the soldiers went the marshes. Joe and Pip hoped they couldn't find the convicts. Chapter Two

Summary

The soldiers ran into the marshes and we saw two men. They were fighting and covered in mud. The soldiers pulled them away from each other.

Pip saw the man that he had helped. He said it was him who had stolen the food from the blacksmith's house. He told them that he was sorry that he had eaten their meat pie. The man was taken to a boat nearby which took him to the black prison ship. A year passed, Pip worked every day, helping neighbours with small jobs, but in the evening he went to the village school. The old lady who taught him often fell asleep, leaving her grand-daughter, Biddy, to show him how to read and write. Joe told Pip that he never went to school as his father didn't let him go but he had a good heart. He taught Joe to be a blacksmith.

Pip preferred that his sister (Joe's wife) to hit him but not Joe as he wanted him to be best friends. Mrs Joe wanted Pip to be grateful to her. Mrs Joe said that Miss Havisham wanted Pip to go to her house. She was a very rich lady who lived in the nearby village. Most people had never seen her because she never left her large, old house. She didn't know Pip but she asked Uncle Pumblechook if he knew a boy who would go there to play with a child who lives there.

Miss Havisham's house, and he's going there. Uncle Pumblechook took Pip to Miss Havisham's house wearing in my best clothes. A very pretty girl took pip inside the house which was unused and most of the doors were closed. Everything was dark inside. He entered a room with closed curtains, lit by candel. He met Miss Havisham the strangest lady he had ever seen, or would ever see, wearing white. He saw a bride in a wedding dress, but everything about her was old and sad. She told him that she had a broken heart. She was tired and bored and asked him to play with Estella. (the girl who made him enter the house). The girl complained that he was just a poor working boy. Estella and Pip played games while Miss Havisham watched silently. Estella said he had dirty hands and ugly boots. Pip felt ashamed. Miss Havisham asked Pip what he thought of Estella. He told her that Estella was proud and very pretty, but very rude. Miss Havisham made him leave promising to come back in six days. Estella gave him some food and drink, but did not hand it to him. She put it on the ground. Tears came to his eyes. When she saw that he was crying, she smiled. He returned home, hurt and ashamed of his simple life. Mrs Joe and Uncle Pumblechook wanted to know what had happened, but he didn't want to tell them the truth. But he told Joe him everything. He told him that Estella said Pip was common and he felt ashamed. Joe told him to be happy with his position in life. He decided to learn as much as he could at the village school. If he had a better education, perhaps Estella would be kinder. He asked Biddy to help him more with his lessons, and she agreed. The village school was very busy and noisy, but when he left it that evening, he hoped that with hard work, he would leave his simple life behind and become a fine gentleman.

On my way home, he met Joe at the village inn. He was sitting with a man he had not met before. He looked at me strangely. 'It's bad weather tonight,' Joe said. The man asked if any escaped convicts had been found recently, and he began to feel uncomfortable. Then the man stirred his cup of tea, and Pip saw that he was using a blacksmith's file. It was the same file that he had taken from Joe's workshop a year ago! But Joe did not notice.

Chapter Three

When Pip realised that the man in the inn had met the convict he helped on the marshes, he wanted to take Joe away. Before we could go, the man gave Pip a new coin. 'This is yours,' he said, 'but be careful!' He took the coin and left with Joe. When they realised that the coin was a pound note. Joe went back to the inn to return his note to him. However, the man had left. Mrs Joe put the pound note on a shelf where it would be safe and there it remained. On his next visit to Miss Havisham's house, Estella took him into a gloomy room where three ladies and a gentleman were waiting. They were Miss Havisham's relatives, Sarah, Georgiana, Camilla and Raymond Pocket, who came to see her that day. Miss Havisham came to see Pip holding up her candle. Estella asked Pip if she was pretty. He told her she was very pretty. He told her that he wouldn't cry again. Pip met a large, dark-haired man and asked him if he was a neighbor and Pip told him that Miss Havisham asked to see him and he told him that wasn't a place to play in .Pip thought he might be a doctor, and entered Miss Havisham's room again.

Pip didn't want to play and wanted to work . A table in her dinning room laid with a table-cloth and plates, prepared for a wedding celebration, but now it was dusty and covered with spiders' webs. Miss Havisham entered the room She asked Pip 'What do you think that is?' 'It's a cake, Pip. A wedding cake! Mine!' she said. She and Pip walked in the room until Estella and the Pockets came in. They wished her a happy birthday, but she sent them away. Miss Havisham told Pip that the wedding cake was brought a long time before he was born and everything was still there. Miss Havisham told Estella and Pip to play. Estella refused to speak to Pip. Miss Havisham asked him to return in a few days and allowed him to leave. Estella put his food and drink on the ground and shut the door. In the garden, he was surprised to see another boy looking at him out of a window. He disappeared into the house, and then came out into the garden to speak to him. He had very pale skin and short fair hair, so in his mind, Pip called him 'the pale young gentleman'. He wanted to fight with Pip. The boy was Pip's age, but much taller than him. They fought but Pip beat him. The boy was brave. He did not see the pale boy again. He visited the house many times. Miss Havisham was happy when Pip told her that Estella was pretty. Mrs Joe and Uncle Pumblechook thought Miss Havisham wanted to give him all her money, and they wanted his visits to continue. He told Miss Havisham that he wanted to be a blacksmith. She asked him to get Joe at once. When Joe came with him, Miss Havisham gave him a large bag of money.

The money was to pay for his apprenticeship. She told him not to visit her again. His apprenticeship with Joe began. Pip no longer wanted to be a blacksmith; he was ashamed of his home and his family. Estella was often in his thoughts, although he did not see her any more. She did not like his position in life, so he continued his education and worked hard. Biddy taught him as much as she knew. After a year, he wanted to visit Miss Havisham and thank her for helping him. Orlick, Joe's workman was angry as he could not have a holiday like Pip too. He did not like Orlick; he was large and slow, and he often tried to make his life difficult at work. An argument began between Orlick and Mrs Joe, who wanted him to see Miss Havisham again. Joe stopped them.
